

Following his jury convictions for official misconduct and evidence tampering, the defendant appealed the trial court's denial of his motion to suppress evidence which he alleged had been obtained as a result of a warrantless entry and search of his apartment. Because the record demonstrates that the defendant voluntarily produced the evidence and consented to its seizure without a warrant, we affirm the trial court.