SEPARATE CONCURRENCE

---

HOLLY KIRBY LILLARD, J.

I agree with the majority's analysis in this case. However, I concur separately to emphasize that our review, under either the common law writ of certiorari or the statutory writ, should be limited to hearing the petitioner's claims regarding "the illegality of acts taken by the disciplinary board." Williams v. Tennessee Dept. of Correction, No. 02A01-9503-CV-00046 1995 WL 575142 (Tenn. App. Oct. 2 1995). Even if the requirements of a statutory writ of certiorari are met, our review should not include the substance of the disciplinary proceeding, i.e. whether the petitioner actually committed the acts with which he was charged.
