Larry W. Bridgesmith, Legal Alignment
The Alternative Dispute Resolution Commission (ADRC) of the Tennessee Supreme Court has managed the most extensive revisions to Rule 31 since its promulgation over 20 years ago. The Supreme Court has reviewed approved and submitted the proposed revisions for public comment. The Supreme Court plans to complete the revision process at its August 2018 annual planning meeting. If all goes as planned, the Knoxville Bar Association event will be one of the first "fresh off the presses" review and analysis of how the new rules will impact dispute resolution professionals, legal practitioners, community mediation centers, courts and the citizens of Tennessee. Your speaker chaired the ADRC committee that supervised the revision process.
